I had the opportunity to become an Emergency Medical Responder through my EMR course. During this course I learned many techniques, including CPR, taking blood pressure and pulse, and learning how to react quickly in an emergency situation. Learning these techniques are helping me pursue my career as a Physician Assistant.

When I interned with Wells Fargo, it allowed me to work a 40 hour week to understand what corporate business was like in an entry level position with their home mortgage office. While I was there, I was able to network and learn about other departments within Wells Fargo by speaking with executives about their experience post graduation.
UNC Charlotte is North Carolina’s urban research university. Through programs, mentors, and connections, we encourage undergraduate students to connect with faculty and take part in research opportunities.

Living on campus introduced me to a diverse group of great people who have become my best friends. It allowed me to have the full university experience and find a sense of community. I had the opportunity to live in Levine hall, which offered private study spaces to ensure my academic success and personal development.
